My heart goes out to the family over the loss of dear, sweet Carolyn. She was a ray of sunshine in so many lives, including mine. In our high school group of friends, Carolyn would crack us up with her fantastic sense of humor, and she was always there for any one of us. She was a beautiful, caring soul who saw the good in everyone, truly spreading happiness wherever she went. I'm glad you are no longer suffering, dear friend; may you rest in peace. With love always, Beth Schlitzkus McKnight

Books teach us that grief of a death is not a sign of weakness nor a lack of faith, but the last act of love given to a lost loved one. And when there is deep grief, there was great love. So, Carolyn, how do I close the book when the story of our sisterhood was not finished? And I can hear her say, " You just do. Grief is a passage, not a place to stay. It is the price of love. And I choose love." Me, too, Carolyn.
