Chris wasn't just a friend, she was my wife Cindy's best friend and confidant for 50 years, a steady presence through every season of life. And there were many seasons. Chris was a light in every room she entered. Strong yet gentle, she carried herself with a quiet grace that put everyone at ease. Her kindness wasn't just a word—it was a way of life. She gave without expectation, always putting others before herself. In every act of kindness, every gentle word, she left a mark on all who knew her. Chris showed us how to love selflessly, and in that love, we will always remember her. Rest well with the angels above my sweet friend.

My dearest friend Chris, it's hard to put into words what losing you means to me. Fifty years of friendship is a lifetime of memories I will always hold close to my heart. I think of our days at Bomar, where our story began, and all the moments that followed. You stood by me through the best times and the hardest—especially when my mother passed. You promised my mom you'd watch out for me, and you kept that promise every single day, with a kindness and caring I will never forget. "I didn't always understand the path—I seldom ended up where I wanted to go, but almost always ended up where I needed to be." And so often, that place was right beside you. You had a beautiful way of making everyone feel loved. That was simply who you were—a truly kind and gentle soul. I am so grateful for you, for every memory, and for the love we shared. Say hi to my mom and your lovely family, sweet friend—until we meet again. And we will meet again. I love you always. Cindy

Her father used to live in Johnson City NY. (My hometown) I got to be phone friends with Chris when he moved back to FL) Friendship became more like being close like sisters for many years. Even with my younger sister Laurie who she referred to as her little tiger. Now they are both in heaven and finally get to meet. Chris was an inspiration and strong person who got me through some tough times too. I cannot believe she's gone. She was a great friend/sis to me miles and states away. I will miss you my dear Chris. I will now talk to You by prayers instead of my phone. Love you. Sleep well and cancer free now. Pat

My fondest memory is every memory of her that I have. She was strong, kind, gentle, loving, selfless, giving and forgiving. She made anyone who met her, want to be a better human being. Her unwavering faith in the Lord is something to be emulated. She acknowledged, validated and respected everyone. To say that she was a kind soul just doesn't seem to be enough. She was the personification of everything that's good and right with the human condition . She was my sister in Christ and my best friend. For that, I am eternally grateful.

Chris taught me that the family you choose are just as important as the family you are born with, and that a smile and a kind word cost absolutely nothing but can have such an enormous impact on the people in your life. This is something we could all use more of, and the world is dimmer without her light and grace. She will be sorely missed, yet her love, and the way she so effortlessly and selflessly gave of her time and attention will live on in everyone that was lucky enough to have known her. Rest well with the angels.
