May the Lord continue to give you all the needed strength

A Daughter's Poem for Her Mother
I was your first daughter, the one who watched your footsteps and later held your hands when yours grew tired. Our home became a place where love moved quietly—in morning routines, in whispered prayers, in the soft way you called my name. I cared for you the way you once cared for me, and though the days were heavy, your spirit stayed light. You would smile through the ache and remind me gently, "One day, there will be no more pain...no more tears." And now, Mama, as you rest in God's perfect peace, I hold on to those words. I let them wrap around my heart like the comfort of your voice calling me from the next room. I loved you with everything in me—every breath, every step, every long night and early morning. And I would do it all again just to hear you laugh, just to feel your hand in mine. Though you have departed, your love has not. It lingers in the walls of our home, in the memories we made, in the quiet strength you left behind. So rest now, My mommy—free from pain, free from tears, free in the arms of the One who promised you peace. And I, your first daughter, will carry your light forward—grateful, honored, and forever yours. With Love Sher

Today I honor my beloved aunt, whose love helped shape some of the sweetest memories of my life. Growing up, the summers I spent with her were filled with warmth, laughter, and a sense of belonging I will always treasure. She lovingly called me her "pretty niece," and those simple words meant so much—they built confidence, love, and a bond I will carry forever. Though I am not able to attend the funeral, my heart is there, celebrating her life and the love she gave so freely. I am comforted by God's promise: "The Lord is close to the brokenhearted and saves those who are crushed in spirit." (Psalm 34:18) Rest peacefully, Auntie. Your love lives on in me always ❤️
